

Sepiapterin reductase deficiency is an extremely rare disorder that affects males and females in equal numbers. More than 40 cases have been described in the medical literature. The exact incidence or prevalence is unknown. Because cases can go undiagnosed or misdiagnosed, determining the true frequency of the disorder in the general population is difficult.