

Pycnodysostosis is an extremely rare disorder that affects both males and females. About 200 people have been reported in the medical literature with this disorder. It is estimated to affect about 1 in 1.7 million people in the general discussion. Pycnodysostosis may go undiagnosed or misdiagnosed, making it difficult to determine the true frequency in the general population.