

The prevalence of porphyria remains unknown, but clinicians suggest that a range of 1 per 500-50,000 of population is probable. Some forms of porphyria are more common in specific populations including, for example, in Finland.