

Kennedy disease affects fewer than 1 in 350,000 males and is very rare in females. Kennedy disease has been diagnosed in the USA, Europe, Asia, South America, and Australia. The Japanese population appears to have a very high prevalence of Kennedy Disease because of a founder effect.