

Diamond Blackfan anemia affects approximately 5 to 7 people per million live births per year. Thus in the United States, with 4 million livebirths per year, there are approximately 25-35 new patients born per year. There are several approximately 5000 cases world-wide. There are an equal number of males and females with the disease.