

In reported cases, leprechaunism has occurred twice as often in females as in males. More than 50 cases have been reported in the medical literature. Leprechaunism was first identified in the 1940s by Dr. W.L. Donohue.