

SLC6A19 Hartnup disease affects both males and females in equal numbers. The disorder usually begins in childhood and continues into adulthood. The number of people affected by Hartnup disease is unknown. It has been estimated to occur at a frequency of approximately one in 30,000 individuals based upon newborn screening results in the United States and Australia.