

Summary Males and females have an equal chance of developing Dubowitz syndrome. It can happen in people of all ethnicities and races. There are between 150 and 200 cases recorded in research articles, but researchers believe that there are more people with Dubowitz syndrome who have not been diagnosed.