

Most reports in the medical literature state that Sprengel deformity affects females more often than males by a ratio of 3-1. However, other reports state that the disorder affects males and females in equal numbers.