

Pallister-Killian mosaic syndrome is a very rare disorder that affects males and females in equal numbers. The exact prevalence is unknown; this disorder may be underdiagnosed because it is difficult to detect in patients with mild symptoms. Currently, more than 150 people with this disorder have been reported in the medical literature.