

CTD is estimated to account for 1-2% of all unexplained X-linked intellectual disabilities. It is the most common of the three cerebral creatine deficiency syndromes. Children with CTD are often misdiagnosed with autism or global developmental delays.